Date and Venue

29th May 2024 in the Clayton Hotel Charlemont, Dublin 2

Introduction

Concrete is one of the most dynamic and flexible building materials in architectural history. A multifaceted material, it has the ability to take on many forms, textures and colours. Architectural concrete is a demonstration of this exceptional quality and how it can be turned into appealing surfaces that will still meet structural and engineering requirements.

Permanently exposed to view, achieving good quality surface finishes can be challenging, requiring an understanding of material properties and the processes involved. In this seminar, our highly experienced speakers will look at the use, specification and finishing of architectural concrete.

A case study on the award-winning International Rugby Experience building will also be presented.
